Reports that General McLaws will lose the Savannah post-office are hardly credible. Grant is his friend, and one blast from his bugle "were worth a hundred men" in these times. Devaux, the bright young colored politician who is aspiring for McLaws's place, may be otherwise cared for. He already has a good place under Collector Tom Johnson. If Pleasants succeeds Wade, as it seems likely he will, the colored element will probably be told it has had enough. Prince, the Augusta postmaster, is for Holden. Tweedy seems to be a weak factor in the contest, and W. J. White does not come with a solid negro support. I understand he has made himself obnoxious to the sensible men, both white and black by sone foolish speeches on the and black, by some foolish speeches on th race question. Holden has strong support. He lives about as much in Augusta as Crawfordsville, and is almost certain of appointment.

He said that his correspondence contained nothing on the subject. TRIAL FOR ARSON.

Elberton New South. On the 15th day of October last, our readers will remember, the gin house at Bowman be-longing to Messrs. Nance & Long, was de stroyed by fire. Save the general conclusion that the work was the act of an incendiary, but little more was thought of the fire, it being so common a thing for cotton gins to be burned down—except by the proprietors, who heard and treasured up everything that was said in their hearing for future action. Most every one else had forgotten the burning until last Thursday, when Robert J. Eaves was brought to Elberton handcuffed by the sheriff on the train and committed to jail, charged with setting fire to this gin house. This revived the burning in the minds of the people, and comments concerning it were almost as numerous as when it first took place Mr. Nance, one of the proprietors, had not let the recollections of his great loss pass out of his mind, but after obtaining such information as satisfied him as to who the incendiary was, he communicated with Captain H. C. Alley, a well known and efficient detective of Spartanhurs. S. C. who chart detective of Spartanburg, S. C., who about three weeks ago came to Bowman to work up the case, the result being the arrest of Eaves. The accused, Robert J. Eaves, well known to most people in the upper part of the county, is a son of Mr. Win. Eaves, who died a few weeks ago, and is largely connected in the county. He lives about two miles below Bowman, immediately on the side of the railroad. He is about 33 years of age, and was, soon after the war, sentenced to the chain-gang for ten years for horse stealing, but on account of good behavior was pardoned out by the governor of the state. The charge against him is one of the most serious known to our law—the code making the setting fire to any house in a town, city or village punishable with death. It appears from what we can learn that Mr. Nance, while running a thresher last summer, had a difficulty with Eaves who was assisting him. appears that several persons who live between Eaves's and Bowman saw him pass towards Bowman and return a very short time before the alarm of fire was given. This in connec-tion with the threats said to have been made, nted very strongly to Eaves as the guilty

The preliminary trial was commenced be-fore his honor, Judge Barnett, of the county court, on Monday morning, and continued till noon to-day, the court committing the ac-cused for trial at March court.

A SAD STORY.

A very sad accident and a terrible death occurred last night at Forrest, sixteen miles up the Georgia road from Augusta A young man, David V. Neal, left the city on the evening passenger about 6 o'clock, got off at Forrest, went into a store and then went out alone. He was under the influence of liquor while in Augusta yesterday afternoon, and it is supposed that he wandered on the railroad track and fell asleep. The night freight train passed Forrest about half past eight o'clock, and while rushing around a curve in a deep cut, ran over young Neal, severing his head completely from his body and also cutting off his left foot. On account of the very dark night and the curving track, Augustia News. of the very dark night and the curving track, the insensible man was not seen till too late, and when the train was stopped, the dead and and when the train was sopportuned and when the train was sopportuned by a solution across the track. No blame could possibly attach to the engineer, and the verdigit after the inquest held by Justice C. J. Clifford was to this effect and in accordance with the facts stated. Investigation showed the come of the young man, and an amprotype name of the young man, and an ambrotype picture of his father was found in his pocket. He was a son of Major George V. Neal, who died a few weeks fince near the spot where his son met his terrible death. Major Neal was before the wild one of the wealthiest citizens of Warren county, and in his youth the state contained no more brilliant or promising son than George V. Neal, He died a few weeks back, the wreck of his former self, leaving several sons in different parts of the state. The mother of these young men was a wonname of the young man, and an ambrotype The mother of these young men was a won derful woman, and lived an experience such as few women ever knew, and which writers paint with weird imagination. Beautiful, gifted and admired, she was in youth an heiress, and her early married life a romance of happiness and brilliant promise. Sons and daughters blessed her home, and honor and prosperity surrounded the name and landed estates of Major Neal of the grand old county of Warren. A change came. The old, sad story of a broken heart, and the wite of a once gifted lawyer struggled, and worked, and almost starved by the side of a wreck of manhood. At last negas few women ever knew, and which writers side of a wreck of manhood. At last, neg-lected, and in a distant part of the state, she died, her gray hairs unsmoothed by the hand of affection, and her heart gone to ashes—the sad memory of a love burned out and buried. The reminiscence is recalled by the death of a son of Major and Mrs. Neal, and while not intended as a chapter on the reversed for-tunes of a well-known family, it may furnish an instructive moral in the lesson of life. The young man was a printer, and only yes-terday was in the office of the Evening News. When a boy he was well known to those of us familiar with home scenes in old Warren, and this fact partly explains the interest which this story may bear.

DeKalb News. We heard last Tuesday a remarkable circum stance, and give it to the public on the authority of a worthy citizen of this county and a friend and relative of the family concerned. It is said that a lady of this county, living in Cross Keys district, gave birth to two children, twins, some time in October, 1881. They were quite small, weighing three and five pounds respectively, but perfectly formed and apparently healthy. The strange part of the matter is that from the day of their birth until some time in the the day of their birth until some time in the month of December, they showed no animation, and scarcely any sign of life beyond respiration, and appeared precisely as if asleep. During all this time they took no nourishment, except a very little sweetened milk forced upon them, and all efforts of the mother to get them to nurse proved unavailing. At the end of about two months after their birth the twins apparently waked up, and became as "peart" and lively as any children, and are now living and thriving. They were weighd at the beginning and also at the end of their long sleep and their weight was precisely the same each time. This is certainly a most remarkable statement, but our tainly a most remarkable statement, but our imformant says he once knew a similar case. The child was John Thomas Greer, formerly of this county, but now living in Colorado, having gone west about 1874 or 1875. He was the corporate funds of said city to the said N.

DIPHTHERIA: Elberton New South.

We mentioned the fact last week that a child of J. W. Etherridge had died with diphtheria, and that Mrs. G. M. Maxwell was then sick with the disease. On Friday last a little child of Mr. Maxwell's died, and the a little child of Mr. Maxwell's died, and the people concluding that it too had died with diphtheria, became very much alarmed for fear the disease would spread through the town and leave a track of graves to mark its course. The members of the town council were importuned to hold a meeting and devise some means to prevent the spread of the disease, if it were possible to do so. Accordingly a meeting of the council was held in the court house Friday night, and several physicians of Elberton were before the body to give their opinions as to what the body to give their opinions as to what should be done. Dr. A. C. Mathews, who was the attending physician at Mr. Maxwell's, said the child who had died that morning did not die of diphtheria and had not the remo test symptoms of any throat affection; but that it died of cholera morbus. He said therefore that all alarm was unneces-sary. The doctors present agreed in say-ing that the best preventive of the spread of diphtheria was cleanliness about yards and lots. The council requested the physicians of Elberton to consult together on Saturday, and if any measure could be used to prevent a spread of the disease to notify the marshal so that a meeting of council could be held that evening. No further means were suggested, other than that before mentioned, and no action taken by council. As soon as and no action taken by council. As soon as it became known that Mr. Maxwell's child did not die of diphtheria the alarm of the people was dispelled, and the town became quiet again.

AN INCIDENT.

Not many miles from Dalton, in a quiet village nestled among the mountains, a little episode recently occurred which had in its episode recently occurred which had in its nature a dash of romance. A young lady, a pretty brunette and a belle of the place, was preparing to start for a popular female institute in a neighboring town to complete her education. This young lady had a lover in the person of a handsome young gentleman, who is well known in Georgia and who will one day make his mark in the political world. day make his mark in the political world. For some time affectionate glances had been exchanged between the pair, but no proposal exchanged between the pair, but no proposal had yet been made, owing perhaps to the timidity of the young man. But when at last the young girle caratoga trunk was carried to the depot, and with tears in her orbs she was bidding adieu to her friends, prepartory to entering boarding school, the tardy lover then realized that "faint heart never wan fair lady," and he requested an interwith Eaves who was assisting him, and that Eaves who was assisting him, and that Eaves made certain threats which the burning of the gin house recalled. Naturally, he lived from hand to mouth, and was unable to lay anything by. THE LUSCIOUS PEACH.

A VISITTO "ORCHARD HILL," NEAR GRIFFIN.

Our Correspondent Calls on the Proprietor of a Large Orchard, Interviews Him, and Obtains His Views on Fruit Culture and Its Profits.

GRIFFIN, February 16.-[Special Correspond ence Constitution]-"Does your train stop at Orchard Hill?" I asked this morning of conductor Mike Murphy, who pulls the bell line over the through freight.

"No, I don't stop there," he replied. "But can't you stop just for a favor?"

"Well, I might." "Shall I get on, then?"

"Yes, I guess so." "That's clever; much obliged."

With this remark still hot on my lips, boarded the fast freight and was soon up in the gabie end of the house-top cab, and the next minute we went spinning away down the Central railroad at a rate faster than any freight trains in America. Twelve minutes to Orchard Hill-six miles-that isn't bad for time, and when you string it out, it just deals a clever 30 miles an hour with twenty cars.

But I are not to talk of fast trains now. My objective point at Orchard Hill was the big peach orchard, and the subjective idea first to get at was the owner of the orchard. The gods were destined to let my lines fall in pleasant places this time, and the very first face I saw on getting off the cab was that of Mr. John D. Cunningham, Jr., the young proprietor of the biggest peach orchard in the

"I have come down, Mr. Cunningham," I said, when we had shaken hands, "to have you tell me something about this big fruit farm of yours. THE CONSTITUTION wants to know about it."

"Well, come up to the house, and we'll take a drive around the place; nothing will give me a greater pleasure, I assure you." And with this latter remark, we commenced our walk to a pretty little concrete cottage that nestles cosily on the top of a hill, some two or three hundred yards away to the north. When on the hill, look which way I might, nothing but a sea of trees was visible. In two months they would be hanging and bending almost to the ground with rich, luscious fruit over which thousands of lips would smack in satisfied delight. To the west the beautiful city of Griffin, with its snow white spires and rows of handsome brick stores a d elegant dwellings, shady walks and pretty streets, appeared lonely mirage in the distance, so perfectly transparent was the atmosphere, and so clearly defined were the houses against the blue horizon beyond. I could but think of what handsome results the city promised as I stood there waiting for my host. To the north and west of Griffin were the rich mines of the Woodruff and Keller fruit farms, covering some three hundred acres in all; to the south, spread out hundreds of fertile valleys that were teeming with the best products of the soil, while within her very borders, shining like a lake of silver in the sunlight, was the most noted of all south-ern fish enterprises, Wright's beautiful carp pond. And here, where I stood, within the pond. And here, where I stood, within the scope of one's eye, were 550 acres of Georgia's red hills that contained 60,000 peach trees! Did the vine clad hills of France or the historic citron groves of Sicily promise a richer yield of earth's sweet products? I could not believe it Falling into a reverie over the panorama and what it suggested would have been quick work had not Mr. Cunningham announced that his furnout was in readiness. "I am going to give you a drive around the place," he said, when we were seated, and the horse started off in a brisk jog.

"How far is it around all your fields?" I

Falling into a reverie over the panorama

"Well, some five or six miles, I guess; but we went go over them all. I want to show you the full scope of the place, though, and then you can form your own idea about it."

"How many acres have you in all?"
"On the place I have 1,350 acres and nearly 600 acres are in peachtrees alone. This is the largest peach orchard in the south, the largest guaranteed.
"representative and honest firms as W.D. Robinson and Cole & Co., of Atlanta, at an aver age of ten or twelve cents each, every tree guaranteed. in the United States and the largest in the world. There is one, however, in New Jersey that is very nearly as large as this, though the tight. I am thinking of planting out 200 acres more next fall, and then I know I shall e no rival anywhere." How about the Parnell orchard near West

"That is probably about one-half as large as mine. I have often heard, myself, that the Parnell orchard was the largest in the south, but I have the figures on all the large orchards in the country, and what I tell you is correct."

"How many trees have you got planted here 'In all, something over 60,000. Of these,

50,000 are good bearing trees, the youngest being four years old." "Don't you plant anything but peaches?"
"Well, that is my main crop, though I have 6,000 apple and pear trees also. I hardly count these in comparison with the others." 'Will you tell me the cost of the entire or chard, trees and all, and what you now value Land, you know, is cheap in middle Geor gia and this cost from eight to ten dollars per acre. I presume that the trees averaged meten cents each. There are the 550 acres in peaches. I have the cost of land $5,500 and trees $6.000. Altogether I expect the improvements will run up a total footing of $15.000. I would not take one dollar per tree for the place as it is, so you can draw your

"Would $75,000 buy the place?" "I don't know; I'd have to study over even that offer. Tell you the truth, I am not at all anxious to sell. Let me tell you someall anxious to sell. Let me tell you something that Mr. Parnell says: On thirty acres of his West Point orchard, in a year when everybody else failed on peaches because of a bad season, he cleared $7.000 even money. He had his fruit in a valley, though, and it escaped the frosts in some strange way that season. Last year I made a failure, and only got about 300 bushels in all. These netted me about $1,000."

"Do you expect a good yield this year?"

"Yes, I think this is my year. All the signs are in my favor. The last good fruit s.ason we had, it was preceded by a mild winter and that's a good sign now. Then, too, the buds are much more backward than they were last year. These are some of the signs that make me hopeful for a grand fruit cop."

"About how many good fruit years will you average in five or ten?"

"Three out of five is a fair estimate. Our fruit crop is always more certain than in any fruit crop is always more certain than in any other section of the country, and some fruits here have been known never to fail."

'Will you tell me something of the prices "Will you tell me something of the prices you get for peaches?"
"Take the crop through and I will average times suffer in silence for years from kidney diseases, or constipation and piles, which could easily be cured by a package of Kidney-Wort. There is hardly a woman to be found that does not at some time suffer from some of the diseases for which this great remedy is a specific. It is put up in liquid and dry forms, equally efficient.—Springfield Union.

50,000 bearing trees, I get 12,500 bushels, or $25,000 net. Now, as we only have three grand yields in five years, that gives $75,000 for the total, or an average of $15,000 every year. This is just 25 per cent profit on the value of the farm, counting it at $60,000."

"What do your peaches bring in the northern markets?"

"I often get as high as fifteen and twent dollars per bushel for extra magnificent fruit, but these are fancy prices and do not come dollars per outsier for extra magnificent fruit, but these are fancy prices and do not come often. In New York and Philadelphia I get about six dollars per bushel on an average, but eight dollars is not high and I often get that, too. I'll commence to ship, in about that, too. I'll commence to ship in about three months and a half."

"How are rates on fruit?" "How are rates on fruit?"
"Simply enormous The question sickens me. Why, there would be an enormous for tune in the business right away if it were not for the frightful express and freight rates. Let me show you how the express companies get nearly twice as much as it costs to raise, handle and prepare the fruit for market: They charge $3.75 per bushel to New York, where I get only $6 for it, leaving me $2.25. If the charge $3.75 per bushel to New York, where I get only $6 for it, leaving me $2.25. If the rates were only lower, you see just what could be done. The companies seem to base their rates on a few fancy prices that we get for fancy fruit. They argue that if the growers can get $10 a bushel we might as well have nearly half of it, and without any ceremony proceed to take it. Of course we are at their mercy."

"Can't you ship by freight?"

"Yes, but it takes too long, and, unless we could use refrigerator cars, the fruit would rot badly on the road. The ocean steamshsps at Savannah offer to carry my fruit at one dollar per hundled, and I ship large quantities that way every year. In fact, I intend shipping the greater part of my fruit that way in future. They have refrigerators on the ships, and I keep a man in Savannah all the season to do nothing but attend to the ice and manage the shipping and packing. Mr. Wadley age the shipping and packing. Mr. Wadley has promised to build us some special cars for the purpose and we may use them this sum-mer. By the way I wish especially to say mer. By the way. I wish especially to say that the Central road has treated me with most marked courtesy and kindness on all occasions, and the promptness of the manager has been a source of great benefit to me. They have never refused any favor I asked.

"How do southern peaches compare with that from other markets?"
"Well, that is the most important point you have asked me, and I am glad it came. You may say that nowhere in the world will peaches grow like they will here. In fact, this is the only place in the world where a perfect peach can be raised. From Marietta perfect peach can be raised. From Marietta to Forsyth, on that ridge, is without doubt the finest spot for peaches in the country anywhere. Another thing, no peaches in the world have as fine a flavor as these we grow here. They raise good fruit in Maryland and Deleware, but they haven't the same delicacy of flavor that ours have. Everybody acknowledges this, that know anything at all about edges this that know anything at all about peaches. Now, these are two points that the public, and especially Georgians, would do well-to remember."

By this time we had driven past the station and on up the Central road for some three or four miles, out and around the big fields of peaches. Nothing but the thousands of rown trees, and millions of brown twigs and tens of millions of buds, could be see and tens of millions of buds, could be seen anywhere. Mr. Cunningham had talked peaches to me; told me of the beautiful prospects he almost saw in sight, until I fell to wondering why al! Georgia didn't go to raising fruit for the world. What a grand old commonwealth we have, anyhow! Spindles ahead of all our sisters; factories, industries and government buryon with the buds. and government buoyant with the hum of enterprise and pluck that is making Georgia a power in the land!

As we were passing around the fields after the prices and values of fruit had been dis cussed, I asked Mr. Cunningham what variety of peach he found to be the hardiest and best growing variety.

"I expect," said he, "that the Beatrice is about the best, though the Amstern-Alexander is also a favorite variety of mine. There is an orchard over there beyond the railroad containing about fifty acres of the Beatrice 500 trees in all. It takes richer ground fo them than some, but they are hardier. The Amsden-Alexander will thrive equally as well Amsden-Alexander will thrive equally as well on rich or poor ground, and grows as well on a red hill as in a rich bottom. These are all early varieties, of course, and are consequently my most valuable fruit. The Chinese cling and early Crawford are later peaches and better fruit for general purposes, but not so varuable in a money point of view because they are late. I consider the Chinese cling the finest peach in the world. It ripens because they are fate. I consider the Chinese ching the finest peach in the world. It ripens in July, and is the best fruit for general domestic purposes that grows. They can be shipped with safety any distance, and seldom rot, no matter how badly bruised. I have had some magnificent specimens, and last year secured a number of them that weighed from twelve to sixteen convects each." from twelve to sixteen ounces each.

Mr. Cunningham says the young peach trees can be bought by the car load from such representative and honest firms as W.D. Rob-

It is generally understood that the orchard ludge John D. Cunnin Atlanta. His son informs me that the judge has nothing to do with the orchard whatever.

In all the 60,000 or more trees planted, Mr. unningham has not had any to die. Peach trees to thrive well must be trained so as to give the branches plenty of sun-light. To do this, the center limbs are clipped out, which makes the branches spread. It must be a good-sized task to "worm 69,000 trees. This is done by raking away the dirt around the roots. Wherever there is a worm it leaves a black streak, and by following this with a knife the worm is caught.

The roots are then washed with Randolph Peters' wash, said to be the best made. The Cunningham orchards cover a space of country spread over several miles area. They are not at all exactly together.
When travelers on the Central want to get a glimpse of the biggest peach orchard in the world, they can commence to look out the windows about three miles south of Griffin going towards Macon. Coming towards At-lanta, the first and original orchard is seen on the right several hundred yards below Orchard

Nothing but budded trees are planted at Orchard Hill.

Mr. Cunningham never allowed a drop of brandy to be made from his refuse peaches. He says he will allow them to make hogs of pigs, but not hogs of men.

There are many interesting facts to be gleamed from a visit to Orchard Hill which cannot be embodied in a letter. Go down and see for yourselt. C. T. L. There is something soft and tender in the fall of a single snow-flake, but it always reminds us to look after our bottle of Dr. Bull's

What the Papers Say. THE STATE IN AN INJUNCTION SUIT.

Savannah News.

Yesterday morning a bill was presented for the consideration of Hon. Charles F. Crisp, at present presiding in the superior court of Chatham county, praying that the mayor and aldermen of the city of Savannah be enjoined from carrying into effect any contract with N. F. Thompson, representing the Naphtha oil company, who are now lighting the street lamps of this city. The bill is based upon information from Hon. Clifford Anderson, attorney general of the state of Georgia, stating that the use of the oil with which the lamps are now lighted is prohibited by the laws of the state. It is probably the first bill of injunction of the kind that has ever been filed in our courts, the principal complainant being the state, through its representative, the attorney general, and the county through her solicitor general. The citizen petitioners are E M Green, Alfred L Hartridge, Robert H Footman, Philip D Daffin, Henry B Dresser, James H Johnston, John L Hammond, Thomas Holcombe, Michael Lavin, John D Robinson and others. After thoroughly informing bimself of the facts in the premises, Judge Crisp granted the following restraining order:

Upon reading the foregoing information Savannah News.

Thompson, or any other person representing him, for the purposes aforesaid; provided that nothing in this order shall be construed to prevent the illumination of the streets of the said city of Savannah with the said burning fluid until the hearing of application for injunction. This order is granted by the undersigned while holding the superior court of Chatham, during a regular term thereof, in the stead of the Hon. Henry B. Tompkins, the judge of the superior court of the eastern district of who is now absent from the district Judge S. C. S. W. C.

February 15, 1882. The bill was filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court yesterday afternoon.

The sheriff served notice upon the mayor last night, and a similar notice will be served upon N. F. Thompson this morning. The attorneys for the complainants are Hon. Clifford Anderson, W. G. Charlton, and Colonel W. S. Basinger. W. S. Basinger.

TRIAL FOR ARSON.

Elberton New South. On the 1sth day of October last, our readers will remember, the gin house at Bowman belonging to Messrs. Nance & Long, was de stroyed by fire. Save the general conclusion that the work was the act of an incendiary, but little more was thought of the fire, it being so common a thing for cotton gins to be being so common a thing for cotton gins to be burned down—except by the proprietors, who heard and treasured up everything that was said in their hearing for future action. Most every one else had forgotten the burning until last Thursday, when Robert J. Eaves was brought to Elberton handcuffed by the sheriff on the train and committed to jail, charged with setting fire to this gin house. This revived the burning in the minds of the people and comments concerning it were almost ple, and comments concerning it were almost as numerous as when it first took place Mr. Nance, one of the proprietors, had not let the Nance, one of the proprietors, had not let the recollections of his great loss pass out of his mind, but after obtaining such information as satisfied him as to who the incendiary was, he communicated with Captain H. C. Alley, a well known and efficient detective of Spartanburg, S. C., who about three weeks ago came to Bowman to work up the case the result heing the arrest of Eaves. the case, the result being the arrest of Eaves. The accused, Robert J. Eaves, well known t most people in the upper part of the county, is a son of Mr. Win. Eaves, who died a few weeks ago, and is largely connected in the county. He lives about two miles below Bowman, imately on the side of the railroad. He is about 33 years of age, and was, soon after the war, sentenced to the chain-gang for ten years for horse stealing, but on account of good behavior was pardoned out by the governor of the state. The charge against him is one of the most serious known to our law-the code the most serious known to our law—the code making the setting fire to any house in a town, city or village punishable with death. It appears from what we can learn that Mr. Nance, while running a thresher last summer, had a difficulty with Eapes who was assisting him, and that Eaves made certain threats which the burning of the gin house recalled. It also appears that several persons who live between Eaves's and Bowman saw him pass towards Bowman and return a very short time before the alarm of fire was given. This in connec-tion with the threats said to have been made, pointed very strongly to Eaves as the guilty man.

The preliminary trial was commenced be-fore his honor, Judge Barnett, of the county court, on Monday morning, and continued till noon to-day, the court committing the ac-cused for trial at March court.

A SAD STORY. Augustia News. A very sad accident and a terrible death oc-eurred last night at Forrest, sixteen miles up the Georgia road from Augusta A young man, David V. Neal, left the city on the evening passenger about 6 o'clock, got off at For-rest, went into a store and then went out alone. He was under the influence of liquor alone. He was under the influence of liquor while in Augusta yesterday afternoon, and it is supposed that he wandered on the railroad track and fell asleep. The night freight train passed Forrest about half past eight o'clock, and while rushing around a curve in a deep cut, ran over young Neal, severing his head completely from his body and also cutting off his left foot. On account of the year dark night and the curving track of the very dark night and the curving track, the insensible man was not seen till too late, and when the train was stopped, the dead and mangled body of the young man was found lying across the track. No blame could possibly attach to the engineer, and the verdict after the inquest held by Justice C. J. Clifford was to this effect and in accordance with the facts stated. Investigation showed the name of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man, and an embraty per state of the young man. name of the young man, and an ambrotype name of the young man, and an amorotype picture of his father was found in his pocket. He was a son of Major George V. Neal, who died a few weeks fince near the spot where his son met bly terrible death. Major Neal was before the walf one of the wealthiest citizens of Warren county, and in his youth the state confained no more brilliant or promising son than George V. Neal. He died a few weeks back, the wreck of his former self, leaving several sons in different parts of the state. The mother of these young men was a wonderful woman, and lived an experience such as few women ever knew, and which writers paint with weird imagination. Beautiful, gifted and admired, she was in youth an heiress, and her early married life a romance. gifted and admired, she was in youth an heiress, and her early married life a romance of happiness and brilliant promise. Sons and daughters blessed her home, and honor and prosperity surrounded the name and landed estates of Major Neal of the grand old county of Warren. A change came. The old, sad story of a broken heart, and the wite of a once gifted lawyer struggled, and worked, and almost starved by the side of a wreck of manhood. DIPHTHERIA. Elberton New South

We mentioned the fact last week that a child of J. W. Etherridge had died with diphtheria, and that Mrs. G. M. Maxwell was then sick with the disease. On Friday last a little child of Mr. Maxwell's died, and the people concluding that it too had died with diphtheria, became very much alarmed for fear the disease would spread through the town and leave a track of graves to mark its course. The members of the town council were importuned to hold a meeting and device some means to present the and devise some means to prevent the and devise some means to prevent the spread of the disease, if it were possible to do so. Accordingly a meeting of the council was held in the court house Friday night, and several physicians of Elberton were before the body to give their opinions as to what should be done. Dr. A. C. Mathews, who was the attending physician at Mr. Maxwell's, said the child who had died that morning did not die of diphtheria and had not the remonstrable arms. It is in all probability destined to be shortly discarded from use in the army. Navy, Irish constability and other government services in not die of diphtheria and had not the remo-test symptoms of any throat affection; but that it died of cholera morbus. He said that it died of choiera morbus. He said therefore that all alarm was unneces-sary. The doctors present agreed in say-ing that the best preventive of the spread of diphtheria was cleanliness about yards and lots. The council requested the physicians of Elberton to consult together on Saturday, and if any measure could be used Saturday, and if any measure could be used to prevent a spread of the disease to notify the marshal so that a meeting of council could be held that evening. No further means were suggested, other than that before mentioned and no action taken by council. As soon as it becan, e known that Mr. Maxwell's child did not die of diphtheria the alarm of the people was dispelled, and the town became quiet again.

Not many miles from Dalton, in a quiet village nestled among the mountains, a little episode recently occurred which had in its nature a dash of romance. A young lady, a pretty brunette and a belle of the place, was preparing to start for a popular female institute in a neighboring town to complete her education. This young lady had a lover in the person of a handsome young gentleman, who is well known in Georgia and who will one day make his mark in the political world. For some time affectionate glances had been exchanged between the pair, but no proposal Dalton Citizen. exchanged between the pair, but no proposal had yet been made, wing perinaps to the timidity of the young man. But when at last the young man. But when at last the young girl's paratoga trunk was carried to the depot, and with tears in her orbs she was bidding adieu to her friends, preparatory to entering boarding school, the tardy lover then realized that "faint heart never won fair lady," and he requested an interview ere it was too late. This was granted, and, presto! there is a change. The trunk is brought back from the depot, the traveling habiliments are discarded, and in the balmy spring time wedding bells will ring out in the juiet little village.

DEATH OF A VETERAN OF THE MEXICAN WAR. Hawkinsville Dispatch.

Hawkinsville Dispatch.

Captain William Kaigler, formerly of Dooly county, died at Andersonville, in Sumter county, on Friday last. Captain Kaigler was a survivor of the war between the United States and Mexico, and was one of the unfortunate command (Colonel Fanning's regiment, we believe) captured in 1837 while fighting for the independence of Texas. We have been told that he was one of the very few, after the "drawing of the beans," escaped with his life. It was his luck to draw a white bean twice. He resided in Dooly county for many years, but some time ago moved to Andersonville, where, as above stated, his death occured on Friday last.

"How are rates on fruit?"

"Simply enormous The question sickens me. Why, there would be an enormous for tune in the business right away if it were not for the frightful express and freight rates. Let me show you how the express companies get neariy twice as much as it costs to raise, handle and prepare the fruit for market: They correspondent Calls on the Proprietor of a Largerhard, Interviews Him, and Obtains His Views on Fruit Culture and Its Profits. "No, I don't stop there," he replied.

"But can't you stop just for a favor?"

"Well, I might."

"Shall I get on, then?"

"That's clever; much obliged."

"I asked this morning of conductor and prepare the fruit for market: I hey charge $3.75 per bushel to New York, where I get only $6 for it, leaving me $2.25. If the rates were only lower, you see just what could be done. The companies seem to base their rates on a few fancy prices that we get for fancy fruit. They argue that if the growers can get $10 a bushel we might as well have nearly half of it, and withcut any ceremony proceed to take it. Of course we are at their mercy."

"Can't you ship by freight?"
"Yes, but it takes too long, and, unless we uld use refrigerator cars, the fruit would rot could use refrigerator cars, the fruit would rot badly on the road. The ocean steamshsps at Savannah offer to carry my fruit at one dollar per hundred, and I ship large quantities that way every year. In fact, I intend shipping the greater part of my fruit that way in future. They have refrigerators on the ships, and I keep a man in Savannah all the season to do nothing but attend to the ice and manage the shipping and packing. Mr. Wadlay

But I are not to talk of fast trains now. My objective point at Orchard Hill was the big peach orchard, and the subjective idea first to get at was the owner of the orchard. In fact, this is the only place in the world where a perfect peach can be raised. From Marietta farm of yours. The Constitution wants to know about it."

"We'll come up to the house and we'll where. Another thing, no peaches in the world have as fine a flavor as these we grow here. They raise good fruit in Maryland and Deleware, but they haven't the same delicacy of flavor that ours have. Everybody acknowledges this that know anything at all about peaches. Now, these are two points that the public, and especially Georgians, would do well-to remember

By this time we had driven past the station and on up the Central road for some three or four miles, out and around the big fields of peaches. Nothing but the thousands of brown trees, and millions of brown twigs, almost to the ground with rich, luscious fruit over which thousands of lips would smack in satisfied delight. To the west the pects he almost saw in sight, until I fell to wondering why al! Georgia didn't go to raising fruit for the world. What a grand old commonwealth we have, anyhow! To the north and west of Griffin were the rich mines of the Woodruff and Keller fruit farms, covering some three hundred acres in all; to the south, spread out hundreds of fertile valleys that were teeming with the best variety of mine. There is also a favorite variety of mine. There is an orchard over there beyond the railroad of fertile valleys that were teeming with the best products of the soil, while within her very borders, shining like a lake of silver in the sunlight, was the most noted of all southern fish enterprises, Wright's 'beautiful carp pond. And here, where I stood, within the scope of one's eye, were 550 acres of Georgia's red hills that contained 60,000 peach trees! Did the vine clad hills of France or the historic citron groves of Sicily promise a richer yield of earth's sweet products? THE COALITION-RUMORS AND REFLEC-TIONS.

There seems to be no doubt that the coalition is in trouble. It is not alone that the sident, and General Longstreet, and Colonel Jack Brown are compelled to subject some otherwise faithful republicans to severe discip-Mne; that were an easy task. The real trouble with the coalition is fundamental. It consists in the fact that the independents have been wofully deceived in their conception of the nature, extent and purpose of the recent family quarrel between the democrats who supported Mr. Norwood for governor and se who supported Governor Colquitt. They supposed the breach was final, when, in fact, there was no breach at all. The young men wanted to have some fun, and the veterans were not averse to a rough-and-tumble cam ign. Both factions went in upon their met tle, both gave some hard knocks-for Greek et Greek-and then the trouble was over. The campaign was rough and lively, and in this respect the honors are easy. When the dust of the scuffle cleared away, there were black eyes and sore shins on both sides, and if anybody bore any malice, we have yet to

At the same time, the mistake of the indedents-so-called-was a reasonable one. ey saw the democratic party divided into we factions; they heard the language emoved: they saw gouging and pulling of hair. nd heard a tremendous pummeling going on; and it is no marvel that they winked grimly at each other and held little advisory uses and things, saying, "Behold our 'great adversary is torn in two; let us rush in and snatch some offices while it is yet day." The mistake was a natural one, as we have aid, but it was no less a mistake on that acount. The breach in the democratic party of Georgia, which was merely technical while t existed, now exists only in the imagination of the leaders of the coalition. Some of the ading spirits of the Norwood movement ave already been heard from and, without sception, they announce their opposition to movement to build up a new party on dry bones of republicanism.

ere is another mistake made by the coa on, and that is in supposing that the inde andent voters are holding themselves in readess to be made tools of in this business. ey will be told, as a matter of course, tha ew movement is essentially democratic its ends and aims, but the independent will be very likely to inquire in this tion how it is that Mr. Norcross, a republican of republicans, is in favor of it; how t is that General Longstreet, a stalwart Grant republican is endeavoring, by all the means at his command, to promote it; how it is that Henry P. Farrow is working in its interest how it is that the republican state committee has unanimously indorsed it: how it is that J. E. Bryant favors it; and, finally, how it is that President Arthur, a stalwart republican, has caused it to be made known that republican office holders in Georgia who dare to oppose the coalition will be compelled to sur render their places to more tractable republicans. These are a few of the inquiries that the independent democratic voters will make before attaching themselves to the coalition; and to make such inquiries is to answer them

But we forbear to dwell with any degree of eriousness upon the programme and pros pects of the coalition which has grown out of he Markham house caucus. The point of nterest, just now, is Washington city, where dose of discipline is to be administered to Georgia republicans who do not like the idea of surrendering the leadership of the new movement to men who have heretofore acted as independent democrats. These protesting republicans have been assured both by the president and General Longstreet (1) that if the new movement is a success, the democrats who lead it will be democrats 20 more, and (2) that if they refuse to give the coalition their personal and official sympathy, aid and encouragement, they will be relieved of their issions. Rumor has it that Collector Wade, of Savannah, has exhibited letters from both Dr. Felton and General Longstreet. and that he is therefore likely to retain his place The raid on Clark, however, is somewhat complicated, and the prospects are that he will have to go. Our information is that while there is opposition to him on the score of his desire to see the republican party take the lead with independentism as a tender, the most formidable opposition comes from Mr. Speer. The latter has held aloof from the oalition, depending upon his personal popuarity in the ninth district, and his confident attitude has not been without its effect upon the administration. The latest programme, therefore, is that Clark must go in order to conciliate Mr. Speer and make him a working member of the coalition. In the meantime Jack Brown and General Longstreet continue to perspire freely, knowing full well that

Rapid Breathing as an Anasthetic

From the Richmond Religious Herald Dr. M. T. Yates, in a letter published in the Bib ical Recorder, says of the surgical operations to thich he recently submitted; 'My doctors said hey had seen it stated by an American doctor that they had seen it stated by an American doctor that if a person would breathe as rapidly as possible under an operation, he would not feel the pain of cutting, and they wished to try it on me, to which proposition I assented. Dr. Macleod superintended the breathing—which was like that of a dog on a hot summer day—holding, out of my sight, a hand-kerchief in his hand to be dropped as a signal when he saw the color come in my face, for Henderson, the operating doctor, to go ahead. When Macleod told me 'That will do,' I was surprised to find that the operation had been performed. This I have tried three times, and have not at either time felt more pain than is usually inflicted in the case of vaccination. I heard the knife rip through the flesh like the sound produced in cutting leather, but I did not feel the pain. What is the philosophy of this kind of ancesthetic? Is it simply a diversion of the mind?"

Cincinnati Gazette. In these days of general vaccination everyone appears satisfied that no evil can arise from this process, because bovine, and not humanized and possibly diseased, virus is used. It remains, however, to be proved that all the animal matter is genaine vaccine virus. Of course educated physicians can recognize the difference between a genuine bustule and mere irritation, but their patients can not generally do so. The most certain virus is that which has passed through one human subject of halthy constitution, and proved in him its original strength and purity. Now that General Cant has become a Gothamite, it has become a subject of discussion with the old Knickerbockers as to whether his family shall be received into that inner and select circle of most conservative people, or allowed to find a place in the whirl of the nouveau riche. The tacit understanding is that the Grants must make their own society. Mrs. Grant is giving some grand receptions these days. The name of Ulysses, she thinks, is an open sesame to whatever circle she chooses to enter. The young Mrs. Grants go out but little this winter. Mrs. Sartoris has attended several bells. She is said to have an odd taste in dress, and the red kid gloves she wore at the Washington reception are not more startling than other toilet novelties she has worn. General Grant has set up in business as oracle of Gotham. He sits in his library, filled with books apparently bought by the yard, and, as he smokes, nervously turning his igar over and over in his mouth, he tells reminiscences. His memory is very great, and now that he has no special reason to be a spainx, he discusses men in public life very freely, and, with an almost unexpected felicity of expression, describes the different shades of their character, dwelling, pernaps, most upon the seamy side, where faults and blemishes may be seen. He has a company of his old cronies whouthim, and as one gets a glimpe of the throng the impression becomes vivid that they are a lot of old topers who have sworn off, for the color of the ruby has not yetleft the tips of their noses.

The well-worn cry. "We are ruined by Chinese cheap labor." threatens to be channed to "We are ruined by Chinese cheap capital," for, besides their many aggressions in the field of manufacture in the city, we now find the ublquitous heathen in a new role. The Redwood City Times and Gazette says: "The Chinese company who are known to have bought the timber land near the Gazes creek have already secured transportation by the stage company for 300 laborers to go down there. The first installment of these arrived on last Sunday and more are to follow from day to day as needed. The first work they are to be put at is the construction of a tramway or railroad down the Gazos creek to the country road or to Pigeon Point chuic, as found most conyenient. The cast of constructing this road is to be shared with the parties who are about to open up the old Gazos mill property. McKinley, of San Fraucisco, seems to be the principal in this last named enterprise, and he proposes to re-establish the old Gazos and to build a new mill up Bear Guich, where the timber has heretofore been but little used. THE SOUTH CAROLINA RAILWAY. Quasi Combination of the Proposed Sale to the Augusta Chronicle.

The Chronicle stated Wednesday that there was a rumor that the Richmond and Danville railroad had made a strong bid for the South Carolina railroad. The folowing special telegram from Columbia, to the Charleston News and Courier, gives color to the rumor: "From what I have heard to-night, in an interview with a railroad official, I am disposed to be lieve that the rumored purchase of the South Carolina railway by the Richmond and Danville combination is not without foundation. The usually gay little city of Cartersville is to-day clothed in a sable garb, and her thrifty, busy streets wear a lonely, desolate and de serted appearance, for upon the doors of many homes hangs that sombre sign of death-

Yesterday the angel of death reaped a rich harvest in that place, and to-day the tolling of the bell and the muffled rumbling of the hearse wheels will carry sadness and sorrow to many a heart, and when the rays of the setting sun cast their weird shadow over the grave-va.d there will be five new graves to add to the superstitious dread of the home of the dead.

Just at the southern end of Cartersville located the Georgia car company's works, and there it was that this terrible carnival of death occurred. The buildings cover several hundred feet of ground, and in them about onhundred and twenty men are accustomed to toil for their daily bread. Yesterday morning after bidding their families good-bye for the day, these laborers sought their place of work, and with a laugh and smile, greeted each other as they began preparing for their

On the eastern side of the building is located the engine room, and in this the men were wont to assemble until the hour for work was at hand, and it was this custom which led to the death of all who were killed with probably a single exception.

Seven o'clock was the hour for work and many parts of the town persons were waitng for the whistie to annotance its airrai, out instead of the usual shrill blast of the team as it escaped from the valve the wait ones were startled by a loud rumbling se, the like of which they had never heard before. Close upon this strange noise came a errible rolling and swelling of the earth which was felt for miles around.

The noise and the jar made strong men quail and look to each for an explanation, but in a second the mystery was in a measure solved by the large column of steam that arose above the Georgia car company's buildings. Then towards this place everybody rushed. Men, women and children were abreast in the race and many a step was taken with that unaccountable feeling of horror which seizes one who knows that the life of those he loves is in danger.

No cause for the explosion can be assigned at present. It has been, as is stated above, the habit of the hands to congregate in the en-gine room to await the blowing of the whistle and of all those who were there yesterday morning there is not one who can tell the tale, as all were killed except the engineer, whose condition is such as to render him unable to speak. At the inquest only three witnesses were examined. The first was John Mitchell, the watchman, who

The fire had been in the furnace about 1½ hours before the explosion. There was then about forty pounds of steam. The engine usually carried about eighty to ninety pounds."

Mr. Kendrick, the Mr. Kendrick, the second witness, said that he passed through the engine room about one uinute before the explosion and that the guage then pointed to 80 pounds of steam, and that the engineer seemed to be making preparation to start his engine.

Mr. J. Z. McConnell said that the engine

That portion of the building in which it was located was about 60x60 teet, and just that much of the building was a total wreck. So great was the concussion that the machinery near the boiler was moved four feet. Pieces of timber were thrown three, four and five hundred feet. The ball which held the safety valve down was thrown about one hundred feet and then buried itself in the solid hard ground. Mr Foute's residence, which stands about 150 feet away, was perforated by sticks and brick, and his yard fence looked like a cyclone hat struck it. One piece of scantling, about five feet long, was driven through the end of a house 300 feet away, and a brick forced itself into Mr. Foute's house through the wall and clastering.

Mr. Robert Hockman, a young gentleman, was standing near the engineer talking to him when the explosion occurred. He was clown clean through a door into the yard and escaped uninjured, while a small white boy, who was in another part of the building, was blown through a window.

Just beside the engine room was the office of the company. In this were Mr. E. L. Lu-cas, the superintendent, and Mr. White. Pieces of the boiler, timber and bricks flew fast and thick about these gentlemen, and the office was totally destroyed, but fortunately neither one was killed. Mr. White escaped without a scratch, while Mr. Lucas was less fortunate, as two ugly scalp wounds will tes-tify. When the explosion happened he was about feurteen feet from the engine, and his escape from instant death was wonderful.

Every window in the building was shattered, and fee blocks around glass were broken. Ars. Hamilton, Baker and Johnson, aided by the other physicians of the city, were among the first upon the grounds and did everything they could to relieve the injured. ond Day of the Georgia State Agricultural Socie AUGUSTA, February 16 .- The society yesterday accepted the invitation of Marietta to hold its next session in that city, and will spend a week at that time among the farmers of Cobb and Pickens counties.

The general conclusion was that a certain proportion of nitrogen in any form pays. In the form of dry blood on cotton seed meal it pays better than mineral forms. He believed that it would be better if fertilizers possessed more phosphoric acid and less ammonia. He asked the farmers to help him in his tests by experi-

He exhibited a frame of comb and a section of artificial comb foundaon. Dr. Brown was listened to with the eepest attention, and evidently greatly in-erested the convention. Dr. Brown is a very bee culturist, and can speak ad risedly on the subject. On motion, a vote of hanks was returned to Dr. Prown for his abl and "sweet" address.

Dr. A. J. Battle, president of Mercer university, of Macon, made a very beautiful ad-dress on the subject, "Beautifying Our Homes." Next to heaven, the sweetest word in our language was home, and the most beautiful idea of heaven was that which represented it as a home.

Colonel A. P. Butler, commissioner of agriculture of South Carolina, read an essay on "Fence or No Fence," or the stock law. Col. Butler held that the agricultural interests of the country were so much greater than the stock that the latter must give way to the formand that the wheels had begun to turn when the explosion occurred. There was then, it is generally believed, about eighty pounds of steam on and the boiler contained its usual supply of water. The boiler was a new one and was purchased by the Georgia car company, from the Carters-ville car works, which corporation had bought it from Lane & Bodley, of Cincinnati. It was considered first-class in every respect. It had been thoroughly inspected by Captain Flynn, master machinist of the Western and Atlantic railroad, whose judgment is considered almost infallible. It had passed under the eagle eye of General MacRae, and was there. it was first adopted, that not a voice can be found in favor of its repeal. The no fence lay found in favor of its repeal. The no fence law encouraged the breeding of better stock. He believed that the general adoption of the no fence law would greatly promote the interests of agriculture. The essay was received with applause.

Several resolutions regarding the fences and stock law were introduced and after some dis-cussion laid on the table for further action. Mr. P. J. Beckmans, of Richmond, read a ery interesting paper on "fruit growing as a arm crop." Inc demand for superior fruit is always greater than the supply. The riety of peaches ripening from the middle riety of peaches ripening from the middle of June to the last of August will generally be ound to be the most profitable compete successfully with growers living four or five hundred miles nearer New York. We have other fruits that are as profitable as eaches, notably the wild goose plum and

The thanks of the convention were returned Mr. Berckmans for his very able paper. General Phillips's resolutions, in reference o experimental farms and agoicultural chools, was taken from the table and read, nd also Mr. Harrell's on the same subject. Mr. Harrell spoke in support of his resolution. He believed that all the taxes derived from the inspection of fertilizers should be devoted to the promotion of agricultural interests. This was an extra tax upon the agricultural interests of the state, and should be used for the benefit of these interests. It should not be used for agricultural purposes. The tax r education should be general, and not from particular interest

After discussion this matter was laid on the table until the August convention.

THE COTTON MARKET

CONSTITUTION OFFICE, Atlanta, February 17, 1882.

New York-Again we chronicle another active and excited week in the cotton market. Futures have been subject to considerable fluctuation, and the state of the market all the week has been so irregular and unsettled that it was impossible to form any conception of what was to be. During the first part of the week futures moved under a depressed feeling and shouldered heavy losses, but sequently and later in the week the tone was changeable, and an occasional reaction would sometimes occur me ely to break the monotony of the situation. To-day the market assumed a firmer attitude, and to all appearances the excitement has been somewhat subdued. At the close futures ruled firm at prices considerably above yesterday's close, though compared with the quotations of a week ago we note a general loss of 15@20 points for the future months. There seems to be no legitimate cause for the decline that has recently taken place, and it is a notable fact that holders of spots over the country have clung on with a remarkable tenacity, and obstinatety refused to make any offerings. This seems to be universal, and conse quently sales and receipts have dropped off amaz ingly Throughout the south the bull element predominates, and, while the great mass of the cotton has been marketed, they teel confident that better prices can be secured on what emains. The great falling off in net receipts is likewise attracting attention, and mast sooner or later have its inluence on the market. Stocks continue ung dentedly large, but any active movement on the part of spinners could, in a short while, reduce the amount to an ordinary proportion. But this stock is supported by a confirmed short crop, and, aside from the maneuverings of enthusiastic speculators, it does seems that ultimately we must get better prices for cotton. Spots closed firmer to-day at 11%c. Offerings have been limited, and business has been at a standstill. Holders are firm and express great confidence in higher prices before very long. The persistent decline in New York has affected a declince in this market, but no one seems eager to sell. A FAREWELL LOOK

AT THE GROUNDS OF THE COTTON

Constitution Reporter Betakes Himself to the Spot Where the Crowds Once Surged-A Change Which Six Weeks Have Wrought - A Descried Place.

Yesterday a Constitution reporter con ceived the idea of giving the people a last glance at the old exposition grounds.

Boarding a horse car on the Marietta street line the reporter was set down at the rolling mill, and from there he tripped along the newly laid ties of the Georgia Pacific until the exposition hotel was reached. This 'banquet hall deserted" is now occupied by Mr. J. W. Cason, who is employed by the Exposition mills company to live there and take care of the building. The Camp hotels have decamped and left not a thing behind to mark the spot where they stood. The exposition ground are under the charge of Major B. N.

Williford. The reporter proceeded on down the track which runs directly along where the exposition depot platform stood, and clambered up the bank to the grand entrance. All the gates were locked, but when the reporter showed his pass he was allowed to enter, and once more stood upon the ground where crowds surged for three menths.

The day was bright and beautiful. It was at midday warm enough to force one to the shady side of the street. As the reporter passed into the exposition grounds everything wore an air of perfect repose, such as the spring days bring to us. Not a man was to be een inside the park, and the reporter felt like one in the midst of a "vast solitude." To the left as he entered he saw the smoke from the city's factories and mills rise lazily and float away. Shaking off a feeling of the sentimental which was fast stealing over him, he turned sharply to the right and entered the art building. As he stood in the doorway of this structure, stretching out nearly four hundred feet before him, he saw only the whitewashed walls and the littered floor. Not an exhibit nor a part of an exhibit nor a and the littered floor. Not an exhibit nor a part of an exhibit was to be seen. The floor was covered with trash, scraps of lumber, etc. Nothing was left of the Heno Tea Hong but the miniature twin lakes and the tea plantation. Of all the hundreds of beautiful exhibits nothing was left that could even give an idea of what the building had been used for. It was as completely deserted as a last year's bird's nest.

From the art hall the reporter headed for the Florida building. As he did so he passed over the ground where the pavilion of the Seven Sisters' entertainment stood. The old red wagon which stood near the canvas during the averaging when the canvas during the exposition was there still. The canvas was one but the monkey cages, the pandora ox and other pieces of furniture were packed up and remained on the ground. It will be remembered that the manager of this show left the city and did not carry his company with him, owing to a misunderstanding f some sort.

When the reporter reached the Florida building he pressed the doors open and went in. The confusion in this building clipsed anything that had been seen in the art building. The earth in which the trees and bushes had been planted was scattered over the floor. Nothing of value had been bettering floor. Nothing of value had been left behind, but there were a few specimens of stone and some woods remaining. A banana tree reaching to the top of the building and showing the young fruit was left behind. The reporter thought of the rather sad history of the building and the exhibit which was made. It will be remembered that the exhibit was one of the most unique that could be imagined, and drew immense crowds of people. The commissioners, Messis, Place and Voyle, were particularly energetic, and entered into the work with great zeal. Before the close of the exposition Mr. Place was taken sick and died. Mr. Voyle returned to Florida after the exposition only to find that the people denied his authority and refused to pay him for his time and outlay beyond the original oor. Nothing of value had been left behind. for his time and outlay beyond the original subscriptions. It is said, however, that lately the matter has been satisfactorily arranged. The building bears a card stating that it is for

The failroad building held none of the articles which were exhibited there during the exposition except a section from a monster walnut tree which grew in Mississippi.

Judge's hall, where all the speech-making was done, remains unchanged. The boilers which furnished the steam are unmoved, and two or three traction ergines are on the grounds. The shrubbery is looking well, and the grass is growing nicely and looks green and fresh. The walks are clean and free from mud, and there is no pleasanter way to spend an afternoon than in walking to spend an afternoon than in walking through the deserted buildings and grounds, through the deserted buildings and grounds, while forty without and a second produced the highest. An Atlanta Crockery Merchant Weds the Daughte of an Atlanta Hardware Merchant.

The younger circles of society were thrown into quite a flutter of excite-ment yesterday afternoon by the rumor of the thrown into quite a flutter of excitement yesterday afternoon by the rumor of the elopement of Miss Julia Francis, one of the prettiest and brightest ornaments of Atlanta society, and Mr. Backman Brown, the well-known Whitehall street crockery merchant. Upon inquiry the rumor was found to be true. For several months past this young couple have been quite devoted, and yesterday they decided to elope. The assistance of Mr. Jack Adair was secured, and he procured a license. They then met, according to agreement, and boarded the 2:15 train for Cartersville—Mr. Brown having gone up on Wednesday and made arrangements to marry in that city at the residence of Mr. Hackett, his relative, returning that night. Mr. Jack Adair accompanied them, determined to be the best man to the last. A telegram was received at 5:30 yesterday evening saying that the marriage had taken place, and that the happy pair would return on Sanday.

AMUSEMENTS.

AGROSS THE CONTINENT.—This sensational drama was presented at DeGive's opera house last night to a good house, by Mr. Oliver Doud Byron and his large coapany. There is but little plot to the play and that is sufficiently diversified and disconnected to make it a good variety entertainment, one both amusing and meritorious. Mr. Byron personated Joe Ferris. He has a fine presence, and invests his part with decided interest, as the audience acknowledged. The play, with its widely varying scenes, taken from the heart of New York, and from the wild gorges of the Rocky mountains, respectively, with its hairbreadth escapes and its closing tableaux, its fun and its minstrelsy, is worth seeing. Mr. Charles Hagan brought down the house in his inimitable imitations. Mr. James Kearney in his specialities was very entertaining. Mr. James Radeliff, in his negro specialties, and as Caesar Augustus, added to the hearty laughter and applause of the evening. Across the Continent will be repeated at the matinee this afternoon. To night Ten Thousand Miles Away will be presented.

EMMA ABBOIT AND HER COMPANY.—The Detroit Free Fress has the following concerning the company; "A telegram received yesterday from Cincinnati brought news of the enormous success of the engagement in that city. The public has clearly is dorsed with enthusiasm the artistic results of Miss Abbott's enterprise in English opera. The artists have been selected from the finest companies, and all possess reputations, while the ensemble, with the fine chorus and orchestra quite fills the ideal of Euglish opera. The light works in the Abbott repetory are given with casts capable of noble work in "grand" opera, so that the popular comic operas are presented in their true and perfect character, without relying on the mere burlesque in the spirit of which those works are so often put forward. The object has been accomplished in drawing a continued run of crowded houses, without which it would be impossible to maintain the star casts. Miss Abbott's popular hold has done as much toward this end as the conscientious and laborious manner in which she has done her work. The public has responded generously to the accumulated improvements in her enterprise, which has stood longer and grown more steadily than any other venture of the sort that has been tried in America. As the principal figure in the combination of artists, she has maintained and added to her reputa-EMMA ABBOTT AND HER COMPANY .- The Detroit As the principal figure in the combination of ar ists, she has maintained and added to her reputs tion, and her company occupies a most enviable rank in the line of English opera."

lowest pitch is reached when the last note falls to the ear. Why is this?

The question was propounded to an engineer the other day by an individual thirsting

one train approaches that in which the listen

"Can you illustrate this to make it plainer?" the engineer was asked.
"Certainly I can. Suppose a man with a rubber hose stands ten yards from a tub. The capacity of his hose enables him to squirt a pint of water per second into that tub. But if, during say five seconds, he walks up to the tub, all the while allowing his hose to pour water into it, there will be more than five pints of water as the result of the tip of the control of the into it, there will be more than five pints of water as the result of that five second's work. There will be five pints, plus the quantity contained in the stream, which would have fallen to the ground if he had stood still and at the end of five seconds turned the cock, shutting off the stream. By the approach of the whistle or bell of an engine a greater number of vibrations meet the ear in a given time, just as a greater quantity of water reaches the tub from the hose by the approach of the nozzle And, accepting as correct the axiom that the greater number of vibrations the higher the pitch, it will be seen that when the trains approach the ear gets more than its the trains approach the ear gets more than its due share of vibrations per second, and when they recede it gets less than its share."

OVERCOATS!

An Accident at Crew Street School.

Why Engine Bells and Whistles Appear Sometimes to

Providence Journal. When two trains, going in an opposite direction at a rapid rate, meet each other, with the engine bells ringing, or whistles blowing, a passenger of the one train notices a marked variation in the tone of the bell or whistle of "The Leader of Low Prices." D.H. DOUGHERTY the other train. When the sound first strikes the ear, the pitch is at its highest. Gradually it goes down, as the train dashes past, and the train is running a certain distance—say a quarter of a mile. Suppose each train runs this distance in half a minute. Then, as the ing passenger is scated, all the vibrations emitted during the half minute will strike the ear in less than half a minute, supposing, of course, that they can be heard over so great a distance. The reason for this is that the first will not be heard until more than two seconds after it has been emitted, as the sound will have to travel half a mile, white the last will be neard the instant it is emitted, because the engine will then be within a few feet of the ear. Thus thirty seconds' vibration will be heard in twenty-eight seconds When the trains are receding from each other the vibrations emitted during the half minute will take rather more than thirty-two seconds. will take rather more than thirty-two seconds to reach the ear, as that emitted when the train is half a mile off will have to travel to "Can you illustrate this to make it plain
